The President's Death Caused by Neuralgia of the Heart—The Autopsy shows the Presence of a Clot of Blood in that Organ.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

ELBERON, Sept. 19, 11:30 P. M.—The president died at 10:35 P. M. After the bulletin was issued at 5:30 this evening the president continued in much the same condition as during the afternoon, the pulse varying from 102 to 106, with rather increased force and volume. After taking nourishment he fell into a quiet sleep. About thirty-five minutes before his death and while asleep his pulse rose to 120 and was somewhat more feeble. At ten minutes after 10 o'clock he awoke complaining of severe pain over the region of the heart and almost immediately became unconscious and ceased to breathe at 10:35.

D. W. BLISS,
FRANK H. HAMILTON,
D. HAYES AGNEW.

History of the Day.

[illegible] P. M.—Shortly after the afternoon bulletins [illegible] issued, Agnew said, in substance, to the reporters, that the examination showed there was no [illegible] change in the situation of extreme gravity. [illegible] Rockwell and Swaim at first exhibited their [illegible] cheerfulness and hopes that the patient [illegible]. Colonel Rockwell says he had pinned [illegible] to the unusually strong constitution of the [illegible] throughout, and was unwilling to give it [illegible]. In reply to a question regarding [illegible] mind, the colonel said: "When hallucinations occur they do not continue any length [illegible] when the president is spoken to during [illegible], he invariably comes to himself and [illegible] sensibly."

[illegible] Boynton went out for a ride, and [illegible] he said: "The president rested [illegible] the afternoon, and if there is [illegible] it is for the better." [illegible] about half-past 4.

[illegible] MacVeagh expressed the opinion [illegible] was no reasonable ground for expecting the president would recover, that no new [illegible] unless he should rally [illegible] the doctors are apprehensive of [illegible] no doubt the president is [illegible] than he has ever been, and that [illegible] have been of but temporary duration [illegible] fully realized his condition [illegible] he was first wounded. He also says [illegible] has been perfectly clear throughout [illegible] that the patient had taken the usual [illegible].

[illegible] there was little ground for a [illegible] and that the case was decided [illegible]. Once during the afternoon the president [illegible] a mirror, and upon placing it in front [illegible] remarked: "Well, I do not understand [illegible] sick while I look so well." [illegible] and that every effort had been made [illegible] day to prevent the recurrence of [illegible] indications of another chill. He [illegible] that the lower portion of the president's [illegible] is covered with small tubercles [illegible] a pin head. If these could be [illegible] the lung might be drained [illegible] condition little can be done.

[illegible] felt somewhat encouraged [illegible] he would say nothing further.

[illegible] hospital story in examining the [illegible]. He found the arc of dullness [illegible] slight degree and the respiration [illegible] more distinctly heard. The pulse [illegible] 102 to 106, and was a fuller and [illegible] than the president has had for several [illegible]. Dr. Bliss talked at length, but his [illegible] the effect that there was no material [illegible] no immediate apprehensions of [illegible] seemed indicative of a quiet [illegible].

[illegible] while Boynton was conversing at [illegible] suddenly appeared and spoke [illegible] undertone, and he immediately [illegible] which he was sitting and started on [illegible] cottage. This movement was a [illegible] of the press congregated at [illegible] something unusual had occurred [illegible] elapsed when Warren Young [illegible] clerks, came to Elberon Hotel [illegible] that the president was dead. The doctor attributed the death [illegible] which caused the formation [illegible] thereby preventing proper circulation.

[illegible] reports to Col. Swaim, who was [illegible] awoke from his sleep were "Oh, [illegible] pain!" and placing his hand on his [illegible] something for me; Oh, Swaim!" [illegible] Garfield had been out of the room [illegible] and had retired for the [illegible] going to his own room. Dr. [illegible] with Mrs. Garfield on the [illegible] president, and that she expressed [illegible] that her husband was not weary [illegible] feeling comfortable and [illegible] pain.

The doctor referred [illegible] attending surgeons on the [illegible] to attend the autopsy and [illegible] Washington, had been selected, to [illegible] Bliss said the formation of a [illegible] of the heart, was a sequel [illegible].

The Last Scene.

[illegible] 2 A. M.—Previous to his [illegible] spoken by the president were [illegible] pain in his heart. It is supposed that death was occasioned by [illegible] the heart. Dr. Bliss was [illegible] of the president's expression of [illegible] the room at once saw that [illegible] members of the family were [illegible] to the bedside. All arrived [illegible]. She was [illegible] and despite her efforts [illegible] her eyes and her lips became [illegible] to bear the burden with [illegible] affected. Miss Mollie was [illegible] of tears flowed from her [illegible] her noble effort to follow the [illegible]. The death scene was one [illegible] perfect quiet prevailed and [illegible] while the president [illegible] had been pronounced the [illegible] arranged by Dr. S. A. Boynton. Mr. Brown walked to Mrs. [illegible] upon his arm as the president [illegible]. Mrs. Garfield was [illegible] but at times [illegible] for a moment [illegible] around her. As [illegible] weeping and the [illegible] were the only sounds in [illegible] came to Miss Mollie [illegible] be too much for her mother [illegible] out of the room. "Certainly, if it [illegible]" was his invariable answer when asked [illegible] treatment. "Oh, but he is [illegible] appearance. He is so thin, and the [illegible] which was always a fine one, is [illegible] face has lost its natural expression [illegible] and cadaverous look that is so [illegible].

[illegible] 1:35 A. M. Sept. 20.—The members [illegible] some refreshment at the Elberon [illegible] and afterwards went to their [illegible]. At this hour all is quiet, and [illegible] sadness prevails throughout the [illegible].

[illegible] Sept. 20.—The flag of the cottage [illegible] president's body lies is tied up with [illegible] portrait of the president in [illegible] in black. The flag over the [illegible] back of here, waves gloomily at half [illegible]. The night passed quietly. The guards moved [illegible] cottage, and within the president lay on [illegible] he had suffered so bravely and died. [illegible] Young and Stanley Brown watched [illegible] the night. Mrs. Garfield went to [illegible] adjoining cottage, but paced the [illegible] together.

[illegible] from Elberon.

[illegible] Sept. 20.—From the Post: Secretary [illegible] body will undoubtedly be taken to [illegible]. That is the result of their [illegible] Garfield at first wished to go [illegible] but has been convinced that it is [illegible] that he should be taken to the [illegible]. The cabinet cannot speak of the death [illegible]. Dr. Agnew says prior [illegible] he speaks with reservation as to the [illegible] of death, but in his opinion it is [illegible] of the heart induced by blood clot.

General Swaim's Account of the President's Last Moments.

Judge-Advocate General Swaim, who was the only one with the president when he was stricken last night, makes the following statement: "It was my night's watch with the president. I had been with him a good deal of the time since 5 o'clock. A few minutes before 8 I left Col. Rockwell, with whom I had been talking for some minutes in the lower hall and proceeded to the president's room. On entering I found Mrs. Garfield sitting by his bedside with no other person in the room. I said to her, 'How is everything going on?' She replied, 'He is sleeping nicely.' I said, 'I think you had better go to bed and rest.' I asked what had been prescribed for him to take during the night. She replied she did not know. She had given him milk punch at 8 o'clock. 'Then,' said I, 'you want a nice night. I will go into the doctor's room and see what is to be given during the night.' She then said, 'There's a beef tea down stairs. Daniel knows where to get it.' I went into the doctor's room and found Dr. Bliss there and asked him what was to be given during the night. He answered, 'I think I had better fix a list and will bring it to you very soon.' I then went into the surgeon's room and had some little conversation with Mrs. Garfield. She felt of the president's hand, laid her hand on his forehead and said, 'He seems to be in good condition,' and passed out of the room. I immediately felt his hands, feet and knee. I thought the knee felt a little cool and got a flannel cloth, heated it at the fire and laid it over his limbs. I also heated a cloth and laid it over his right hand and sat down in a chair beside his bed. I was hardly seated when Boynton came in and felt of the president's pulse. I asked him how it seemed. He replied, 'It is not as strong as it was this afternoon, but very good.' I said he seemed to be doing well. 'Yes,' he answered, and passed out. He was not in the room more than two minutes. Shortly after this the president awoke. As he turned his head on awakening, I arose and took his hand. I was on the left hand of the bed as he lay. I remarked, 'You had a comfortable sleep.' He then said, 'O Swaim, this terrible pain!' placing his right hand on his breast over the region of his heart. I asked him if I could do anything for him. He said, 'Some water.' I went to the other side of the room, poured out an ounce and a half of Poland water into a glass and gave him to drink. He took the glass in his hand, I raising his head as usual, and drank the water very naturally. I then handed the glass to the colored man, Daniel, who came in during the time I was getting water. Afterwards I took a napkin and wiped his forehead, as he usually perspired on awakening. He then said, 'O Swaim, this terrible pain! Press your hand on it.' I laid my hand on his chest. He then threw both hands to the side, and about on a line with his head, and exclaimed, 'Oh, Swaim, can't you stop this?' and again, 'Oh, Swaim!' I then saw him looking at me with a staring expression. I asked him if he was suffering much pain, and receiving no answer, I repeated the question with a like result. I then concluded he was either dying or in a severe spasm, and called to Daniel, who was at the door, to tell Dr. Bliss and Mrs. Garfield to come in immediately, and glancing at the small clock hanging on the chandelier nearly over the foot of his bed, saw it was 10:10 o'clock. Dr. Bliss came in within two or three minutes. I told Daniel to bring a lighted candle which habitually stood behind the screen near the door. When the light shone full on his face I saw he was dying. When Dr. Bliss came in I said, 'Doctor, have you any stimulants? He seems to be dying.' He took hold of his wrist as if feeling for the pulse and said, 'Yes, he is dying.' I then said to Daniel, 'Run and arouse the house.' At that moment Col. Rockwell came in, when Bliss said, 'Let us rub his limbs,' which we did. In a very few moments Mrs. Garfield came in and said, 'What does this mean?' and a moment afterwards said, 'Oh, why am I made to suffer this cruel wrong?' At 10:35 P. M. the sacrifice was completed. He breathed his last, calmly and peacefully."

Disposition of the Body.

MacVeagh thinks the body will be taken direct to Washington by special train to-morrow morning.

The Sorrowing Wife.

Mrs. Garfield is bearing up bravely and doing well. Private Secretary Brown, who watched with the body, says Mrs. Garfield exhibited great calmness and fortitude.

The Remains to be Buried on Monday.

LONG BRANCH, Sept. 20.—MacVeagh says the corpse will leave for Washington on Wednesday and lie in state in the rotunda of the capitol on Thursday. It will leave for Cleveland on Friday, where the funeral will be held on Monday, and the remains interred in Lake View cemetery in that city at the president's request. The autopsy will be held this afternoon.

Offers of Aid, etc., Received.

ELBERON, Sept. 20.—Many offers of guards to the remains have been received, also condolences, including one from the lord mayor of London.

A Guard Tendered.

The adjutant general of New Jersey tendered MacVeagh a guard to remain here.

Arrival of President Arthur at Elberon.

1:55 P. M.—President Arthur and Secretaries Blaine and Lincoln have just arrived.

Condolence Tendered.

All diplomatic representatives have tendered condolence.

The Body being Embalmed.

2:35 P. M.—The embalmer has arrived and the body of the president is being embalmed.

Boynton's Account of the Death.

Boynton gives the following account of the death scene: "He had been sleeping quietly until about 15 minutes before his death. I stepped into the room to examine his pulse and found it had grown much weaker, but not alarmingly so. I remarked it to Swaim. The president said to Swaim, 'Oh, Swaim, what a terrible pain I have here,' and placed his hand upon his breast over the heart. Doctors and members of the family had by that time gathered, and the colored man stood at the door. There was scarcely a perceptible movement in any other than the sufferer's features, and no movement of the limbs. The pulse grew less frequent and [illegible] bent over him and examined it. He found no pulse. I put my ear down to the heart, but discovered no pulse. Mrs. Garfield placed her hand on his chest, partly bending over him, until after he died. All of us sat there a little while, and then we left the room. The first time Mrs. Garfield broke down in tears was when she left the door of her room. She returned in half an hour and remained with her husband till 2 A. M. Swaim and Agnew remained for some time. Secretary Brown watched until 2 A. M."

The Question of an Inquest.

In response to an inquiry, Secretary Windom said nothing was definitely determined regarding an inquest. It is believed the authorities were looking up law on the subject. It is maintained by persons acquainted with the laws of the state that an inquest cannot be prevented if insisted on, and in event of the conclusion that the president's death was induced by a gunshot wound, the criminal's presence can be demanded in the state. This question is creating considerable excitement and anxiety, inasmuch that if the laws are enforced in accordance with this idea, the remains will be necessarily delayed here until Guiteau arrives. The state law is being examined, and the district attorney has been summoned.

The Proposed Inquest Abandoned.

The proposed coroner's inquest on the president's remains has been abandoned by the local authorities.

The Autopsy.

ELBERON, Sept. 20.—The autopsy has been in progress for more than an hour. One of the first discoveries made was a large clot of blood in the heart which corroborates the opinion of the attending surgeons regarding the immediate cause of death.

Movements of Secretaries Blaine and Lincoln.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Blaine and Lincoln, without waiting for breakfast, went to Gen. Arthur's. Nothing noteworthy occurred. They left him at noon for Long Branch. Arthur's face betrayed the deep grief from which he is suffering, as did the features of Blaine and Lincoln, who were delayed four hours by an accident on the New Haven railway near Port Chester.

General Grant extends his Sympathy.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Gen. Grant, who is in town, was interviewed at midnight. He said the event was sad and unexpected. He sent the following to MacVeagh at Long Branch: "Please convey to the bereaved family of the president my heart-felt sympathy and sorrow for them in their deep affliction. The nation will mourn with them for the loss of the chief magistrate so recently called to preside over its destinies. I shall return to Long Branch in the morning and will tender my services, if they can be of any use to them."

President Arthur goes to New York with Grant.

4:30 P. M.—Arthur left for New York on a special train. The withdrawing surgeons and Dr. Lamb, of Washington, have arrived. Gen. Grant went arm-in-arm with Arthur to the carriage which took him from Elberon. The carriage returned empty, so he probably went to New York with the president. Arthur called on Mrs. Garfield before leaving, expressing his sympathy and assurance of his great sorrow.

Garfield's Property.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—The president made no will. He said he was willing to trust the courts to divide equally his property, which amounted to $25,000, and included his house in the city which is mortgaged.

The President's Insurance.

The president had $25,000 insurance in the Equitable Insurance Company, and had considerable in other companies.

Heavy Work at the Telegraph Office.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—The Times says the telegraph office in Elberon hotel was surrounded and there was a shower of bulletins thrown upon two paralyzed operators. No more than the simple announcement of death could be sent off, as the government alone took exclusive use of the telegraph office at Elberon. Personal dispatches were sent. Warren Young sent the first official announcement off to Washington and Mentor. The president had been dead half an hour, when at 11:10 Windom, Hunt and James arrived from the West End. They went into the hotel office, and were met by MacVeagh, who led them away to the cottage. At 11:15 the members of the cabinet are inside Francklyn cottage engaged in consultation. A great crowd waits outside for further particulars and the excitement is intense.

The Michigan Sufferers want Help.

DETROIT, Sept. 19.—The governor has just issued a proclamation to the people of the United States urging upon their attention the needs of 15,000 homeless and destitute sufferers by the recent fires, and detailing the vast amount of territory burned over. The case really seems to be desperate and to call for united and generous efforts from every section of the country.

Markets Closed.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—No markets to-day anywhere in the country. Exchanges closed.

A Bloodless Duel.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—The duel of Wise and Lewis was bloodless. Wise fired into the air after being missed by Lewis.

EVERY CITY, NORTH AND SOUTH, DRAPED IN MOURNING—THE COUNTRY PLUNGED IN GRIEF.

England Mourns in Sympathy with our Sad Affliction—The Generous Tone of all Journals, Irrespective of Political Belief—The South Joins in the Universal Expression of Sorrow.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—The lateness of the hour at which the news of the president's death was received prevented its being generally known except at the principal hotels, clubs and other places where men are accustomed to gather until late at night. Many who heard the news hurried to telegraph stations and newspaper offices for its confirmation. The interest centered on the illuminated bulletin on the roof of the building at the junction of Broadway and Fifth avenue. Bulletins given there were favorable as late as 10 o'clock. At that hour streets were thronged and the corridors of the hotel were densely filled. Then the light of the camera was turned off and crowds slowly dispersed. The last bulletin shown was encouraging. The crowds grew smaller and smaller. Within ten minutes after the president died Mr. Carr, chief clerk, got the news through telephone. A little later a telegram came confirming the intelligence, and the clerk [illegible] a group of five or six men about the desk. This was eleven o'clock. At 11:20 about twenty men were around, when a group of reporters rushed in. One of them seized a sheet of note paper and fastened it to the wall, with the words in pencil, "The president died at 10:35." In five minutes men began to crowd around the sheet of paper. Many of them doubted its words, and came to the clerk's desk to be convinced. The news was then scattered quickly, and in ten minutes the corridors were jammed. Men came down stairs half dressed, others came running in from supper parties to get the truth, and the crowd grew on the sidewalk until it overflowed into the street. About midnight men and boys came panting from newspaper row hoarsely crying, "Extras! extras!" Papers were sold at any price as fast as they arrived; casements flew up in front of houses, and windows were alive with inmates watching the confusion.

A Place of Mourning.

The city is literally a place of mourning. Flags are at half mast, and all other signs of grief are shown.

A Solemn City.

A heavy mist obscured the sun rays until a late hour this morning, giving to the city with its thousands of drooping half mast flags a sad funeral aspect, deepened by the tolling of fire bells. All ferry and shipping in the harbor, from the least to the largest craft display flags at half mast. All the principal places of business and numbers of private houses are being draped. A hush and solemnity prevails. The busiest streets, noticeably on Broadway, where the din and roar is usually greatest, the vast tide of business people surging into the city by rail, road and ferry, this morning has lost the hum and buoyancy that usually characterizes it. Newspaper stands are swept bare of every word of publication, with the single and significant exception of the one in which the forgery of Garfield's handwriting appeared during the presidential campaign, great piles of which paper were left untouched. The crowds do not seem to dim[illegible] about the bulletin boards as the day wears on.

At Cleveland.

Wade, to telegraph the widow, offering her any lot in the cemetery she may choose for the final resting place of the president's remains. At Quincy.

QUINCY, Ill., Sept. 20.—No such exhibition of popular sympathy was ever seen here before as was to-day displayed by democrats and republicans—a significant rebuke to the editor whose editorials have disgusted the country.

The Feeling in the South.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—The tone of the editorials of southern papers received here are exceedingly tender and moderate, and except for an occasional hope expressed by them that nothing but harmony between sections will result, and that for once justice may be done in this matter, the editorials might with equal propriety appear in northern or republican newspapers.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 20.—Citizens this morning are busily engaged in draping residences and places of business in mourning. United States courts and offices are closed and meetings of various public bodies announced to take suitable action.

Early this morning officers of banks and insurance companies met and decided to close their places of business for the day. Soon after the produce exchange held a meeting, adopted suitable resolutions and appointed a committee to act with other similar committees, and voted to shut down business for the day. The board of trade met a little later and took similar action. The chamber of commerce appointed a committee to draft resolutions and confer with other committees. Business is suspended in the wholesale part of town, and banks, insurance offices and public offices, stock boards, etc., are closed. This evening a committee of the board of supervisors will meet committees of other bodies and representative citizens and decide upon a proper observance of the day of funeral. The work of draping the city in mourning is proceeding actively. The popular expression of respect and regret has even penetrated to the Chinese quarter, where flags are at half-mast, and theaters and other places of amusement closed. Minute guns are now being fired.

Will Draft Resolutions.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 20.—The republican state central committee held a meeting this afternoon at which a committee was appointed for the purpose of drafting resolutions on the death of Garfield.

The Funeral Obsequies at the Bay City.

Committees of the board of supervisors, chamber of commerce, board of trade, produce exchange and a number of leading citizens met this evening and decided that on the day of the deceased president's funeral there should be a procession of citizens and military and civic organizations on a grand scale. The column is to be on foot with the exception of the marshal and aids. The committee that originally had charge of the Fourth of July celebration, which was postponed on account of the assassination, was invited to join the other committees and the money subscribed for the celebration of the Fourth be used to partially defray the expenses of the obsequies. The officers appointed for the Fourth will act on the present occasion. This evening all places of amusement, including even minor theaters, melodeons and concert halls are closed, and the city is unusually quiet, except for the presence of numerous throngs on the streets.

A Day of Humiliation and Prayer.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 20.—Gov. Perkins has issued a proclamation appointing the day dedicated for the president's funeral as a day of public humiliation and prayer. The Army and Navy League and posts of the G. A. R. have taken action looking to a union of action with other public bodies in observance of funeral ceremonies. Decorators have been busy all day and the principal streets now present a succession of emblems of mourning.

The News at Olympia.

OLYMPIA, Sept. [illegible].—The news of the president's death has cast a gloom over the entire city, almost equaling that occasioned by the same report on July 2d. The entire city is draped in mourning. Every bell is tolling and sadness is seen in every face. There will be an entire suspension of business on the day of the funeral.

Governor Newell to President Arthur.

The following dispatch was sent by Gov. Newell:

To His Excellency President Arthur, Washington, D. C.: I transmit to your excellency the condolence of the people of Washington territory at the death of that great and good man President Garfield; also to Mrs. Garfield, to the cabinet and to the people of the United States.

WM. A. NEWELL.

At Port Townsend.

PORT TOWNSEND, Sept. 20.—As soon as the news of the president's death was received here, minute guns were fired, the fire bell tolled and all flags, both in the city and at the fort, and on vessels in the bay were displayed at half mast. The principal buildings were draped in mourning and all the business houses were totally closed and the blinds lowered. A deep feeling of sadness prevails everywhere and general regret is expressed on every hand by every denomination.

At Jacksonville.

JACKSONVILLE, Sept. 20.—There is universal sorrow here to-day. All places of business are closed, flags at half-mast and the town draped in mourning. Bells are tolling and minute guns firing. The sad news had almost deadening effect.

The Grief is Universal.

EMPIRE CITY, Sept. 20.—Almost every business house in this place and Marshfield is draped in mourning and closed to-day in sorrow for the president's death.

A Handsome Tribute.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The News says: By common consent, President Garfield's life, which has been passed in full view of the public, has been free from spot or blemish, distinguished in the field, able and upright in conduct, a soldier without fear and a citizen without reproach.

Sympathizing England.

The death of the president is the common theme of conversation and regret. The same is true all over the country; every sign of sorrow and respect is manifested.

The queen telegraphed to Lowell, the American minister, viz: "With deep grief, myself and children learn the sad, but not unexpected, news of the termination of the sufferings of the president. His loss is a great misfortune. I have learned with deep sorrow that the president has passed away."

The Prince of Wales telegraphs Lowell: "The princess and myself offer our sincere condolence to Mrs. Garfield."

Earl Granville, secretary of foreign affairs, telegraphed Lowell: "I am deeply grieved." He has sent a cablegram to Washington directing and requesting the secretary of state to inform Mrs. Garfield and the government of the grief with which the English government has received the announcement.

Parliament not sitting is prevented giving expression to the sympathy universally felt, which is deepened by the courage and dignity displayed by the sufferer.

A meeting of Americans in London under the auspices of the London legation will be held as soon as proper arrangements can be made.

Accounts continue to arrive of manifestations of sympathy in the provinces of Ireland and Scotland; particularly at Cork, in consequence of its intimate connection with American shipping interests.

The bells of Chester cathedral were tolled and also some of those of churches in the west end of London.

The evening papers have published a sympathetic history of the late president.

Queenly Sympathy.

LONG BRANCH, Sept. 20.—This has been received by Mrs. Garfield: "Words cannot express the deep sympathy I feel with you. May God support and comfort you as He alone can." QUEEN, Balmoral.

Expressed Deep Regret.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The lord mayor, in taking his seat at the Mansion House to-day, expressed, on behalf of the citizens of London, the deepest regret at the sad news from Elberon.

Motion of Sympathy.

THE HAGUE, Sept. 20.—The legislature adopted a motion of sympathy with the United States.

At Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Sept. 20.—The grand welcome to Sir John A. Macdonald is postponed on account of the calamity to the United States until after the funeral. Their action is universally approved.

At Montreal.

MONTREAL, Sept. 20.—Citizens are in a sympathetic mood.

PRESS COMMENTS.

A Universal Expression of the Highest Respect for the Dead Executive.

Cincinnati Press Comments.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 20.—The Gazette says: The vanity of human wishes and brittle nature of the hopes of a mighty nation are exhibited in their extremest degree when such a calamity can be brought about by the dastardly crime of a small, wicked and worthless political adventurer. In view of the woes of the stricken wife, children and mother he [illegible] worthily earned and received the crown of a noble career.

The Enquirer says: "The people, with an affection which was beautiful in its universality, might [illegible] death [illegible] such as did the president. We pity the man or woman whose duty it will be to communicate the news of death to his aged and gentle mother, the venerable woman whose old age, which might have been cheered by the greatness and goodness of her dutiful son, must be told that her boy (for in maternal affection he was always a boy—her baby, if you please), has closed his eyes in death."

Democratic Comment.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 20.—The Republican says: There is no heart so strong, no fortitude unbending as to seek to hide the emotion excited by the close of this national tragedy. The people are not in a mood to consider consequences, but in the words of the dead chief, "God reigns, and the government at Washington still lives." [illegible] the endless chain which moves the machinery that ensures to this broad land the blessings of peace, order and security. It is here recorded with universal respect that Arthur has, in the trying past two months, shown himself thoughtful, manly and wise beyond what has been hoped for by his surprised and anxious country. It is far easier to-day to [illegible] trust in Chester A. Arthur than it would have been on the fateful morning when the assassin struck the blow which raised him to the presidential office.

EUCALYPTUS.

Eucalyptus has of late years been found very useful for a great number of the ills that flesh is heir to. Its latest application is in the shape of Steven's California Pine and Eucalyptus Porous Plaster, an article which possesses almost magic merit and is fast superseding all others; it is the best porous plaster. It is endorsed by the medical profession throughout the land. For sale by Woodard, Clarke & Co., Portland, Oregon.

THE FINAL OBSEQUIES.

MOVEMENTS OF THE FUNERAL CORTEGE FROM ELBERON.

THE BODY TO LIE IN STATE AT THE CAPITOL ON THURSDAY, AND THEN BE CARRIED TO CLEVELAND FOR FINAL INTERMENT.

Monday Designated as the day of the Funeral—Preparations for the Reception of the Remains—Ceremonies to be Observed in Various Places on that Day.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.

A Long Branch special says: Preparations for the removal of the effects of the president's party are beginning. Attendants and workmen are engaged packing trunks at the cottage. Private Secretary Brown says the extreme emaciation of the president was a surprise to the undertaker and embalmer. It is possible to clasp the leg above the knee with one hand. Some doubt whether if the president lies in state at Washington it will be declared safe to allow [illegible] the remains.

The Funeral Cortege.

MacVeagh, who manages the removal of the remains from Long Branch to Washington, says the Pennsylvania railroad will tender a special car [illegible] here to be used on the occasion. The train will be made up as follows: First car, baggage; second car, remains of the president, and escort; third car, Mrs. Garfield and family; fourth car, cabinet and surgeons. The train will take the same route as when the president was removed to Long Branch. No stops will be made except for water. No correspondents will accompany the train. It is the desire of those managing arrangements for removal that a train shall be run either in advance of or after the president's special for the reservation and other purposes. The special train will be run slowly and all through trains be laid over for it to pass. The present intention is that the train shall leave here about 10 A. M. to-morrow, and arrive at Washington between 4 and 5 P. M. After lying in state in the rotunda of the capitol Thursday and Friday, the remains will be taken charge of by the Pennsylvania railroad and be conveyed over to Pittsburg, and from thence to Cleveland.

The Funeral Preparations.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—The war department will to-morrow issue an order that every military post, station, fort and arsenal shall go into mourning for thirty days. All expenses of arsenal mourning observance will be paid by the government; that Gen. Sherman will have charge of the general conduct of the president's funeral and all matters relating thereto; that there should be prepared and published a schedule giving the date of the funeral, the hour the remains and cortege will leave Washington, time of arrival at each station en route to Cleveland, and precise moment at every stop will be made en route; that all flags be at half mast and kept there for 30 days; that salute of 13 guns be fired at sunrise each day for 30 days, and afterwards during the day, at intervals of half an hour one gun from the [illegible] to the setting of the sun, and at the close of every day a national salute of 38 guns, and that army officers all wear mourning for six months. Another order will be issued from the war department to-morrow morning announcing to the army the death of the president, and that President Arthur has been sworn in and, according to law, is now president and commander-in-chief of the army. The president's remains, accompanied by the family, cabinet, friends and escort, will reach here to-morrow morning. The rotunda of the capitol will be draped and a catafalque is being constructed. It is not known precisely what will be done. The White House is being prepared for the reception of the remains. The chandeliers are being removed from each room, and a catafalque is being erected. If it is intended to lay the remains in state in the White House, everything will be in readiness. The guard of honor will consist of nine general officers of the army, nine officers of the navy not below the rank of captain, and twenty-nine picked men of the army. From the porch of the White House a canopy of black will be erected, extending to each room. No information has been obtained as to when President Arthur will arrive, but private dispatches say he will come here to-night.

Departments to be Closed.

The departments will remain closed till after the funeral.

Colored Curiosity.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—After 2 o'clock this morning 40 to 50 negroes called men at the jail from curiosity and left when the guards satisfied them.

Naval Flags to be at Half Mast.

Rear Admiral Nichols, acting secretary of the navy, this morning sent telegrams to all the commandants of navy yards and stations and the naval academy, directing flags to be kept at half mast until further orders in respect to the memory of President Garfield.

Orders to the Navy.

LONG BRANCH, Sept. 20.—Secretary Hunt orders the navy commanders to pay a fitting honor to the deceased chief magistrate according to the regulations of service.

Arranging the Late President's Papers.

Assistant Private Secretary Pruden was arranging the late president's papers at the White House this morning.

Preparing for the Reception.

Secretary Brown has telegraphed that the party would leave Long Branch for Washington to-morrow. It is not known whether the remains will be brought to the White House or directly to the capitol. The summer's cleaning up was going on at the White House, but every effort is making to restore it to its proper condition. The streets were densely packed all night by men, women and children seeking the news.

THE WRETCH GUITEAU.

His Reception of the News of Garfield's Death—Fears of his own worthless carcass Predominant—The Law will take its course.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Warden Crocker visited Guiteau in jail this morning. Guiteau asked him concerning the president's condition, expressing fear that the president was nearing the end. Crocker then told him the president was dead. Guiteau instantly sat down on the bed, and appeared much excited. He then rose and paced the floor and appeared to be praying. When told the particulars, he said he was glad the president's sufferings were over, and would not have committed the deed had he known he was to suffer so. Guiteau was less nervous and alarmed than the warden anticipated. He has a deadly fear of mobs, and urges the United States to protect him.

No Trouble Apprehended at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—The news of the president's death did not reach the jail in which Guiteau is confined until about midnight. At that hour everything was tranquil. Guiteau was resting quietly in his cell, and there was no excitement in the neighborhood of the jail, nor was any trouble apprehended by officials. Gen. Sherman said in conversation to-night he did not expect any attempt would be made to take the prisoner, and expressed the hope that the good sense of the people of the district would prevail, and that they would allow the law to take its course.

Plenty of Law in Washington for Guiteau.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Corkhill denies that Guiteau will be taken to New Jersey for trial. There is plenty of law here to cover his case.

Guiteau Anxious.

Guiteau heard the bells tolling at midnight, and suspecting the cause, tried to pump the guards.

An Old Pioneer Dies.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR.

He Takes the Oath of Office in New York—Comments upon his probable Course.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20, 3:15 A. M.—In accordance with the dispatch received from the cabinet in regard to taking the oath of office, messengers were sent to different judges of the supreme court to [illegible] in an appearance. The first to arrive was Judge [illegible], who was closely followed by Justice Donohue. The party, consisting of the vice president, [illegible], District Attorney [illegible], Elihu Root and the elder son of the new president, assembled in the front parlor of No. [illegible], General Arthur's residence, where the oath of office was administered and he became president of the United States. The president has [illegible] his intention as to [illegible] will visit and declined to be interviewed as to his course.

President Arthur Takes the Oath.

LONG BRANCH, Sept. 20, 1 P. M.—MacVeagh has just received this reply to the dispatch sent by the cabinet to General Arthur last night. It is addressed to all the members of the cabinet and says:

I have your message announcing the death of President Garfield. Permit me to renew, through you, the expression of sorrow and sympathy which I have already telegraphed to Attorney General MacVeagh. In accordance with your suggestion I have taken the oath of office as president of the United States before Hon. John R. Brady, justice of the supreme court of the state of New York. I will soon confer with you further in regard to the other suggestions of your telegram.

C. A. ARTHUR.

The other suggestion referred to was that President Arthur should come to Long Branch this [illegible].

Gov. Cornell has an Interview with Arthur.

From the World: Roscoe Conkling left the Fifth Avenue Hotel at 10 o'clock. It was said he drove to Arthur's house. He had returned at 12.

The Vice President Sends his Sympathy.

The following was received by Attorney General MacVeagh last night:

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.

Hon. Wayne MacVeagh, Attorney General, Long Branch:—I have your telegram and the intelligence fills me with profound sorrow. Express to Mrs. Garfield my deepest sympathy.

CHESTER A. ARTHUR.

President Arthur Leaves for Elberon.

President Arthur, accompanied by Col. Bliss, left at noon for Elberon by special train.

Speculations Concerning the new Administration.

Various rumors about the purposes of the coming administration are afloat, but high officials who are close friends of President Arthur say there will be no change of the cabinet before the meeting of congress. In regard to an extra session it is not believed any will be called. Many think even the senate will not be convened in extra session, till after the regular meeting is so near at hand. There is an opinion among some prominent friends that the senate will be convened early, and under the circumstances President Arthur will feel disposed to assemble the senate to assist in starting his administration, yet these matters are mere speculations, as it is not likely President Arthur has given any thought to them.

Kind Words for Arthur.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—The Times has some kind words to say for Arthur, who, it says, in his native state is highly esteemed by republicans who differ from him in politics. They admire him as genuine. The Times believes he will recognize the fact that the people chose Gen. Garfield to be president, and approved his policy as far as he had opportunity to carry it out, and desire no changes in it, and no sudden changes in the personnel of the government until circumstances may make them imperative. His administration begins with the shadow of death overhanging it and with a considerable amount of distrust in the minds of the people. The Times hopes and believes it will close under brighter skies and with the sunshine of national approval resting on it.

The People will Suspend their Verdict.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—The fair and respectful tone of editorials received here show that while [illegible] Arthur goes into office under a shadow of distrust, the press and people are willing and expect to suspend judgment, and accord him a full measure of respect.

Spurts of disgusting mucous from the nostrils or upon the tonsils, Watery Eyes, Snuffles, Buzzing in the Ears, Deafness, Crackling sensations in the Head, Intermittent Pains over the Eyes, Fetid Breath, Nasal Twang, Scabs in the Nostrils, and Tickling in the Throat are SIGNS of CATARRH.

No other such loathsome, treacherous and undermining malady curses mankind. One-fifth of our children die of diseases generated by its infectious taint, and one-fourth of living men and women drag out miserable existences from the same cause. While asleep, the impurities in the nostrils are necessarily swallowed into the stomach and inhaled into the lungs to poison every part of the system.

Dr. Wei De Meyer's Catarrh Cure absorbs the purulent virus and kills the seeds of poison in the farthest parts of the system. It will not only relieve but certainly cure Catarrh at any stage. It is the only remedy which in our judgment has ever yet really cured a case of Chronic Catarrh.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, SEPT. 2[illegible], 1881.

THE DEAD PRESIDENT.

Testimonials to the worth of the dead president come from all quarters. No one who notes them can doubt that he is sincerely mourned. The death of Lincoln affords the only parallel within the memory of living men. Yet the feeling under that affliction was of a different kind. There was hot blood then, which is absent now. The present grief is quiet and subdued, but in some respects and for that reason even more profound. Lincoln's death was accepted as one of the sacrifices of the great war. It was not so surprising that it should have occurred when sectional and party passion was burning with so fierce a flame. But Garfield's death occurs under different circumstances. There was absolutely no reason to expect the assault, and the event is a benumbing and paralyzing blow.

All over the land the people are testifying their appreciation of the dead president. The demonstrations are universal. Business is everywhere forgotten. The general feeling is one of heavy and almost silent sadness. People care little to talk. Though they have been almost expecting the death of the president for many weeks, they are shocked and stunned by the event, now that it has occurred. Little will be thought of, and less will be done, till the funeral ceremonies have closed. The one thought on the heart of the country is the dead president.

The telegraphic reports give an outline of the course to be pursued in respect of the obsequies. As soon as the remains of the dead president have been embalmed they will be taken to Washington where they will lie in state under the rotunda of the capitol during Thursday. On Friday they will be taken to Cleveland, Ohio, where the last rites will be paid on Monday. At the president's request his body will be buried in Lake View cemetery, near Cleveland.

H. W. S.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR.

Chester A. Arthur becomes president. It is no secret that he has been understood to represent views and purposes in politics very different from those of President Garfield. He has been regarded as a representative man among the so-called "stalwarts." At Chicago he was constant in his support of the third term scheme and of the machine and gag system. After Grant was beaten Arthur was nominated to "conciliate" that section of the party. The death of Garfield in no small degree reverses the work of the Chicago convention. The natural conclusion would be that it brings the section of the party that was defeated there directly into power. This would imply portentous changes in politics. But Arthur as president may be a very different man from Arthur the politician. Responsibility may and doubtless will have a sobering influence. A like influence will pretty certainly be exerted by the necessary remembrance of the sad event which has made him president. The future course of politics is largely in President Arthur's hands. He may take such a course as will consolidate and strengthen the republican party, or he may adopt a policy which will rend and virtually destroy it. If he shall understand that the republican party is resolved not to submit to or tolerate the sort of politics which makes official place the booty of greedy politicians, which dominates party action by unscrupulous "professional" methods, and puts a syndicate of bosses with their retainers and followers into power,—if he understands this and acts on the knowledge that it will not do, all will be well. But the course which President Garfield was pursuing cannot be reversed without disruption of the party. President Arthur, however, will not be hastily or harshly judged. He is the constitutional president, and the people will accord him a generous support which will be continued according to his deserts.

THE FARCE OF A TRIAL.

No man who realizes his responsibility as a citizen can advocate popular violence in dealing with the assassin Guiteau; for law is the rule of organized society, and though men must often deplore its inefficiency they cannot afford to weaken such power as the state wields even with an imperfect instrument. The sanctity of the law and such power as it possesses depend on adherence to regular methods. And yet, while men talk of bringing this assassin to trial, such proceeding, though invested with all the ceremony and dignity which attend the execution of the law, can be nothing else than a farce, a poor stage play, mere mimicry of legal administration, a masquerade of justice, with the clear principles of law converted into mummeries and jargons. The reason is that no law is adequate for such a crime. To talk of trying this assassin by a jury is mere babble and deliration. Possibly the form may be gone through, but even that is doubtful. How is a jury to be obtained? Among all our fifty millions of people there is not one of common intelligence and right feeling who has not a just horror of this dreadful crime and a decided opinion that the world ought to be rid as quickly as possible of the monster who perpetrated it. Are all men of this class to be rejected from the jury because they have expressed their minds as to this assassin and his most atrocious crime? This would be the usual course. How then could a jury be obtained? The only resource would be those stolid and stupid persons to whom all things are utterly indifferent, or loafers, vagrants, communists and miscreants generally, to whose class this assassin himself belongs. The prospect of a verdict according to right and justice from a jury so made up would not be particularly hopeful. When therefore men talk of according to Guiteau "a fair trial" they are converting a common platitude into most meaningless nonsense. This is not a case for a jury, though doubtless a jury must be called. A nation has rendered its verdict, and a jury trial will be only a farcical proceeding. In accord with a favorite idea of the "humanity" of the times the assassin may be acquitted on the ground of insanity. What then? Justice, as administered through courts of law, may be entangled and enmeshed in her own modes of procedure. But this assassin will not be permitted to live. No creature can live on the earth after having committed such a crime. There is a sense of justice and eternal fitness which, if the law fails, will supply its defects or break over its impediments. In such a case real insanity would indeed protect the man by the stroke of whose hand a whole people mourns, for the public heart is pitiful and yields always to the dictates of humanity. But here is an utterly worthless, despicable and devilish wretch, a vagrant, swindler and lazy loafer, who has been engaged in petty criminal practices all his life from the consequences of which he has had the cunning to escape, but which he has at last crowned with this most overwhelming crime. To speak of such a wretch as "insane" is to abuse beyond patience an already much abused word. Just how the earth is to be rid of his vile presence no one can yet tell. Anything like a trial will probably be utterly impossible, for how is a jury to be had? Again, any trial will be only a farce, since the crime admits of no possible statement in palliation and a jury of fifty millions of people have pronounced their judgment. So while it is not certain how the end will be reached, this remains certain that no creature can live on the earth after having committed such a crime.

A Washington special says Guiteau expects acquittal partly on the ground of insanity and partly on the ground that the prosecution cannot prove malicious intention on his part. This might be supposed a miserable report, did it not suit so well this vagrant devil's shallow character.

FOOD SUPPLIES FOR EUROPE.

Consul Wilson writes from Belgium to the state department that Europe has lost the hope of rivaling this country in cheap agricultural produce, but will contest more strongly than ever for continued supremacy in manufactured goods. He writes also that the statesmen and economists of Europe have for some time been considering the expediency of forming a new commercial confederation, somewhat on the model of the old German zollverein, with the implied, if not expressed, intent of keeping the United States out of foreign markets. This subject was also seriously discussed at "the international commercial and industrial congress," held in Brussels in October last. There is probably no need of alarm on this point, since the United States, under her present system, which the protectionists maintain expressly to make manufactured goods dear, cannot compete with the manufacturers of Europe on equal terms in any market.

Consul Wilson gives some valuable information about agriculture in Europe. He says that the mean cost of cultivating a hectare (two and a half acres) of land, fertilizers included, has risen from 60 francs in 1816 to 115 francs at the present time, while the product has nowise increased; and the value of this yield (because of the importations from abroad) has absolutely declined. In addition to this startling fact railroads and other modern improvements have been drawing population from the fields to industrial establishments in cities and elsewhere; so that a growing scarcity of farm labor and consequent higher wages must be added to the unfavorable conditions of increased rents and more costly fertilizers, under which the food producer labors. Profitable agriculture and cheap production of food have, therefore, ceased in Belgium, and the same is, or is becoming, true with regard to most European countries. Mr. Wilson therefore foresees an almost unlimited development of this country as a granary of the world, and a demand for manufactures from our own farmers in consequence of an enlargement of their ideas of comfortable living coincident with their own growing prosperity. But our system of "protection," which is framed and supported expressly to restrict the free intercourse of trade, interferes with all this and we are requested to wait till some time in the future, comforting ourselves with the old protectionist idea of the farm selling to the factory near by, while the factory in turn sells to the farm, neither caring for the foreign purchaser. This provincial and bucolic theory of industry and commerce is picturesque in its simplicity, but is fifty years out of date, even for our country. An appeal to it now as the sum of wisdom in industry and trade is fit to be compared with the old methods of ship building and obsolete processes of manufacturing. To a people situated as we are the case is a plain one. Europe wants our products and we want hers. There should be the greatest possible freedom, in the place of every possible restriction, of exchange. Our interests would be particularly subserved by it. Europe is almost the sole market for our products; yet we are so hampered by our own laws that we do not get the benefits that would come to us naturally, if we would strike the shackles from commerce and let men trade as their mutual interests directed.

POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS.

The postmaster general of the United Kingdom has just published his annual report, in which is a very flattering statement of the operations of the postal savings banks in that country. All money-order postoffices are offices of deposits for savings, and are open during business hours of the day and designated evenings. Deposits may be made in sums as small as one shilling, but not to exceed one hundred and fifty dollars by any one person in any one year. Seven hundred and fifty dollars exclusive of interest, is the largest sum that may be deposited by one person in any number of years, and when principal and interest amount to one thousand dollars interest ceases. Depositors can withdraw a part or the whole of their deposits within ten days from the date of demand, and may make the demand at any postal savings bank in England, Wales, Scotland or Ireland. Interest commences on the first of the month after each deposit is made. The number of postal savings banks in the United Kingdom is now about six thousand, and the annual deposits are about fifty millions of dollars. During the three years ending with 1879, a net profit of one and three-quarter million dollars, arising from surplus interest on investments, was paid into the exchequer of the government. This is only a brief outline of the English system of postal savings banks, but it shows what is possible in this country, whenever the people shall demand of their national legislators some measure looking to the same beneficial ends. Deposits in the British postal savings banks now amount to £34,000,000 sterling, or nearly $170,000,000, and the depositors number more than 2,000,000.

The election in Ohio is to take place in about three weeks. Readers of the telegraphic reports have noted the correspondence between the committees of the respective parties in regard to the contest. The democratic committee proposed that in consideration of the critical condition of the president there be no discussion of political questions. The republican committee answered with several pointed expressions. It was just as well to remind the democratic managers of the base and malignant calumnies against which General Garfield's true friends "vindicated his honor and good name less than a year ago." Moreover, "an honest and candid presentation of the principles of the republican party, which President Garfield loved and advocated with all his great honor, is neither improper nor unpatriotic." And the gentlemen of the democratic committee were reminded that the question "whether it were proper at this time to advocate the principles which President Garfield always believed to be injurious to the country was one for their own committee to determine for itself." It is well remembered that the attacks on General Garfield during his candidacy exceeded in falsity, in calumny, and in desperate malignity, anything ever witnessed before in the history of our political contests. Hence these reminders come now with a great deal of force, how much soever those at whom they were directed may affect to question their propriety.

Dr. Thomas of Chicago has been convicted on all the charges and specifications of "heresy" and has been suspended from the Methodist ministry. On the charge of denying the inspiration of the bible the committee stood six to three. On the charge of denying the doctrine of the atonement it stood five to four. This would indicate that the so-called liberal views of the accused has considerable support in the church. The case now goes up to the annual conference, where there will doubtless be a hot contest over it.

CITY.

THE CITY IN MOURNING.—Nearly every store and building in the city hung out yesterday emblems of mourning for the dead president, which contrasted strangely with the gay colors shown during the visits of General Grant and President Hayes two years ago. Front and First streets are almost unbroken lines of somber festoons. A few of the larger edifices have not yet been draped for [illegible], but by this evening every building in the business portion of the city, and a large number of residences will wear a badge of mourning. These evidences of respect are not confined to prominent places and public buildings, but every fruit stand, smoking establishment and humble restaurant joined in the general draping. Even in the outskirts many stores were draped. From all quarters the city flags floated at half-mast, and [illegible] in the city flags floated at half-mast, and shipping had their colors lowered. [illegible] variety could be given to draping, and it [illegible] to festoons and streamers of black and [illegible] over doors and windows and under awnings, [illegible] on pilasters, occasionally relieved by [illegible] some black, some white. Prominent every[where] [illegible] portraits of the dead chief, surrounded by [illegible]. A leading dry goods house had its [illegible] windows richly draped—one with black [illegible] and merino shawls, relieved by mourning [illegible] handkerchiefs; the other with black and white [illegible] merino. Another house had in the [illegible] window a small bed of camelias, white geranium, and maiden's hair fern, and around this bed, [illegible] ivy and myrtle. As a back ground, from [illegible] of the window hung several rich black [illegible] in graceful folds. Other stores showed much [illegible] in combinations of black and white fabrics. [illegible] the larger boys of the Harrison street school [illegible] rosettes on the left lapel of the coat. The [illegible] is made of black crape, the second layer of [illegible] and the center a button of crape. Now [illegible] time of the funeral has been fixed, a meeting will probably be called to-morrow to arrange a [illegible] observance of the day here.

[illegible] THE OIL.—The arrivals at the Clarendon [illegible] were sent to this paper for publication [illegible] morning and they were published, but [illegible] headlines of another caravansary. Hence no one about [illegible] be blamed with the faux pas. The [illegible] with the lubricating oil. Our new press [illegible] finest quality of lard oil made expressly [illegible] Penobscot. [illegible].—About noon on the 17th inst., [illegible] the Umatilla river, Milsey Lewis [illegible] got into a dispute over the pos[session] [illegible]. Angry words ensued, when [illegible]. The latter picked up a butcher [knife] [illegible] away at Lewis, who soon fell from [illegible] five wounds in his left shoulder [illegible]. The wounds were dressed by [illegible] of his city, who happened to be [illegible]. The unfortunate affair is [illegible], as both young men are respectably [illegible] heretofore borne the reputation [illegible].

STATE VS. J. C. POWERS.

The Case in Progress—A Number of Witnesses for the Prosecution Examined—The Trial Will Probably Last the Rest of the Week.

Court met at 9 o'clock pursuant to adjournment. The panel was completed by selecting Geo. W. Abbott and Ulric Smith.

On completing the panel the opening statement of the case in behalf of the state, by District Attorney J. F. Caples, was made. J. McGearn on behalf of the defense addressed the jury for some time.

At the conclusion of the opening statements by counsel, Judge C. B. Bellinger, one of counsel for the defense, arose and stated that he thought the court ought to adjourn, or at least take a recess, in respect to the memory of President Garfield, whose death had been announced. He therefore moved that the court adjourn until such time as the judge might design te.

His Honor Judge Stott allowed the motion, and stated that the court would stand adjourned until 1:30 P. M.

Court convened at 1:30 o'clock, and the case was resumed. The first witness sworn for the prosecution was

DR. C. H. WHEELER,

Who was called and testified:

I reside in Portland; have resided here for the past year; am a physician and surgeon; knew Cornelius after the shooting; was in front of the Esmond on the evening of July 4th. On that evening I was in the billiard room of the Esmond; heard shooting; started out into the saloon; was going out and some one said better go back or I might get shot; went out the night [illegible] office door and stood on the sidewalk, but soon returned as the shooting was going on [illegible]; went out again as soon as the firing ceased and found two men lying on the street; Dr. Wells came very soon after, and we made a very imperfect examination of Cornelius' wounds; Cornelius was brought into the office of the hotel, and another examination—only a partial one—was made of his wounds; soon after he was carried up to his room in the hotel, where a thorough examination was made; we found three gunshot wounds in different portions of his body and a contusion over the right eye. [The witness here explained at some length and in technical terms the nature and character of the different wounds inflicted.] The injuries had all been made recently; the external hemorrhage was very slight; the wound which was made in the abdomen was the one which caused death, or at least was the direct cause; I went to Cornelius soon after the shooting ceased—not more than one-half minute; found both men, Cornelius and Powers, lying on the street, only a few feet apart; I raised Cornelius up to see where he was hurt; [witness here pointed out on a diagram, which had been prepared, showing the intersection of Front and Morrison streets, and the buildings on each side, the relative positions of the parties at the time of the shooting, and immediately following] on the street a very superficial examination was made of Cornelius' wounds.

To the question of what did Cornelius say to you when you first raised him up, as to the fatality of his wound, an objection was raised by counsel for defense. Question was argued at length, and not allowed by the court.

Witness resumed: Cornelius was not more than ten minutes in the street, and in the hotel office, before he was carried up to his room; Powers was lying not more than two feet away; I thought Powers was dead, and stepped by accident on his body; Cornelius remained in the hotel office about three or four minutes before he was carried to his room; I was with Cornelius from about 9 P. M. until 3 A. M.; went away and returned to the hotel about 6 A. M. and remained until 10 A. M.; I went away again and returned soon after noon, and he had just died; Cornelius' condition seemed to be pretty well understood by himself; he spoke of his condition several times; said he was going to die; that he wanted to die; that he was "shot all to pieces;" he said "I am dying;" "that "I am killed;" at the same time entreating us to let him die; he also gave many exclamations of pain; these were quite frequent during the earlier portion of the night; during the latter part of night he was under the influence of opiates and resting; he did not get under influence of opiates until about 11 o'clock; these words were spoken before he was under the influence; he would beg for us to let him die, and when we wanted him to lie still he would say, "It is of no use, I cannot lie still, I am going to die;" a number of other physicians were present during the evening; we did not give him any particular hope that he was going to live; Cornelius, when I first went to him on the street, exclaimed, "Oh, my God! I am going to die; I am shot all to pieces;" it was in answer to a question asked by his son as to his injuries that he made use of these words; this was only a very short time after the shooting had ceased.

To the question did Cornelius say anything to you as to who had injured him, objections were raised by counsel for defense and sustained by the court, after long and elaborate argument by counsel.

Witness resumed: He made the remark that he was going to die several times; on the street, in the hotel office and in his room; do not remember to have heard Cornelius say anything about who shot him, or mention any of the circumstances of the shooting after he said it was no use to move him, that he was going to die.

DR. HARVEY,

I reside in Portland; am a physician; have been practicing for nearly 30 years; was called to see Cornelius on the evening of July 4th; went in company with Dr. Wells; we were at Dr. Wells office when a telephone message came from the Esmond; we went and found Cornelius lying on the street; he said while lying on the street that he was shot all to pieces; that he was going to die; that he was killed; he was taken to the hotel office and afterward to his room; up to 11 that night Cornelius was under the impression that death was certain; that he must die; I did not hear him say anything about who shot him; remained with him some time—from the time I was first called until about 11 o'clock that night.

[The witness then described minutely the nature of the wounds inflicted.]

I heard Cornelius say after he was taken up stairs that he had been expecting to be shot some time.

At the request of counsel for the defense the court instructed the jury that the last statement of the witness was not admissible testimony, and that they should not consider it.

MRS. E. CLINCK.

Reside at Beaverton; have lived there for four years; have taught school there; was in Portland on the 4th of July; did not know Cornelius during his lifetime; saw Cornelius once before the shooting; was sitting on the sidewalk in front of the St. Charles on chairs, in company with several others, on the evening of July 4th; it was about 20 minutes past 8, when one of the persons who was with us said: "There is a fight;" I saw two men having a disturbance, they were on the sidewalk opposite the Esmond; I saw them pulling at each other and heard loud talk; presently the words, "You will shoot, will you;" one of the men moved toward where we were sitting; I noticed that one was a large man, and the other was small; the large man seemed to be backing, and the small one following; the large man stepped off the sidewalk, when the smaller man struck him over the head; could not see whether or not he had anything in his hand; just then shooting commenced; all the firing I saw or heard was done by the small man; the small man fired three times in rapid succession; did not see the large man doing anything; when we heard the shots we got up from the chairs and moved to the edge of the sidewalk; could see both men and their hands; saw the small man holding the other by the arm; he fired two shots while they were standing in that position; there was no firing until the small man followed the other out into the street; the first shot came from the direction of the small man.

[Witness showed the jury the relative positions of the two men on the diagram.]

The view was not obstructed by anything during the fight; we could plainly see all that took place.

Cross-examined—When I first saw the men they were both on the sidewalk; when I first saw them they were changing positions; they were going off the sidewalk when I first noticed the difference in the size of the men; they were about the middle of the sidewalk when my attention was first called to the trouble; saw other men on the sidewalk near the two men at the time; I saw the men falling, just as I was entering the door of the hotel; I was worked up with excitement over such a scene; those with me went into the hotel together—before the crowd gathered about the two men; as they stepped off the sidewalk the two men were coming toward where we were sitting; the men were moving about all the time; the large man started to fall first and the small one also fell a moment later; the large man seemed to fall sidewise; both were just falling as I left and entered the hotel; the large man did not seem to take part in the fight, the small one was holding to his arm; did not see the large man strike the other; both men seemed to be maneuvering for the sidewalk or for position, in order to get the advantage.

C. R. QUINLAN.

I live at Stayton, Marion county; was in Portland on the evening of July 4th; was in the vicinity of the Esmond when the row commenced; I did not know Cornelius; was slightly acquainted with Powers; saw the men on the sidewalk and heard the men talking; heard one say, "You would shoot, would you?" I did not know either party at the time of the row. [Witness explained on the diagram the relative positions of the two men when he first saw them.] I think the large man was pushing the smaller man back; could not swear who fired the first shot; thought at first that the men were trying to stab each other; both were scuffling; some parties were between where I was standing and the men, so that I could not see clearly all that occurred; it seemed that the small man was holding on to the large man's arm; thought at first he was trying to cut him; I went over after the shooting ceased and saw the men while lying on the street.

Cross-examination—When I first saw the men they were making demonstrations; think there were some four or five shots fired in all; could not say positively; two were in very rapid succession; could not possibly state who fired the first shot; at the time of the shooting both men were very close to each other.

DR. W. H. SAYLOR.

I am a physician and surgeon; have resided in Portland for about six years; knew Cornelius during his life and also Powers; saw Cornelius on July 4, both before and after the trouble; saw him at the Esmond about 10:30 in his room; saw that he had been shot in three places. [Witness here described technically, the nature of the several wounds.] The wound in the abdomen produced death; was with Cornelius from 10:30 P. M., July 4, until 6 A. M., July 5; was also with him at the time of his death; he was suffering great pain when I arrived and he was soon placed under the influence of morphine; in order to make a thorough and satisfactory examination of the abdominal wound, I allowed him to come out from under the influence of the opiate; though the wound might possibly be superficial, that the ball might have been deflected from its course and be lodged in the muscles of the abdomen; he complained of great pain low down in the abdomen; he said at the time I made the examination that he knew he was going to die; told him if he thought he was going to die he had better make a statement, if he had any to make; told his wife this and she had a private talk with her husband; he made a statement, but it was not reduced to writing; he said that he had met Powers that day and that they had quarreled; he said he threw back his coat and told Powers that, if he was going to shoot him he had as well do it now as any time, and that Powers shot him; saw Cornelius about 2 o'clock in the afternoon of the 4th, and had some conversation with him.

[Counsel for the prosecution here asked witness to relate the substance of that conversation. This was objected to, and the court took the matter under advisement, stating that the witness could be re-called later in the progress of the trial.]

Cross-examination—Cornelius made his statement about 2:30 A. M. on July 5th; when I first came to the room I found him under the influence of morphine; he was asleep, or in a stupor at the time; he was comparatively free from the effects of the narcotic for about three quarters of an hour after I allowed him to come out from under the effects; administered more morphine after that; he was more or less under the influence of it until his death; he was able to talk at intervals and called his family about him before dying; his wife suggested to me that he had better make a statement; Mr. Tozier of Hillsboro, and Mrs. Cornelius were present when he made the statement; told him if he thought he was going to die he had better make such a statement.

Evening Session.

The court convened at 7 P. M.

MRS. CLARA HENRY

Called and sworn—Was in Portland July 4th, was in company with Mrs. [illegible] on the evening of that day; was not acquainted with either Powers or Cornelius; saw them in the trouble in front of the Esmond house; first saw them as they were stepping off the sidewalk; the large man stepped off first; saw flash of revolver three inches, I think, from the lash of the revolver I think the firing was by the small man; the men were close together; the shots were rapid; the last I saw of the men they were falling as near as I could tell they fell sideways; heard some one's name called; some one said, "[illegible]."

Cross-examination—When I first saw the men they were just stepping off the sidewalk; the flash of the pistol seemed to go toward the large man; could not see their right hands; they changed positions frequently.

[illegible] TEACHOUT.

Live on Chehalem mountain, Washington county; am a farmer; was in Portland July 4th; am not acquainted with defendant; did not know Cornelius; never saw them until that evening; the first I saw of them they were clinched and shooting; they were off the sidewalk and scuffling; heard one say, "You'd shoot would you, you d—d s— of a b—h;" afterwards learned it was Mr. Cornelius; afterwards heard him say he was shot all to pieces; from where I stood I could not tell who was doing the shooting; the last was toward the Esmond House; after the men were on the ground, they were clinched together, and Cornelius' son came up and pulled Powers off his father; Powers again got on his hands and knees and crawled up and got hold of Ben Cornelius again; Charley pulled him off a second time and then drew his pistol and fired.

Cross-examined—Ben Cornelius got up and was sitting on the sidewalk when Charley shot Powers; first saw them clinched on pavement off the sidewalk; heard three or four shots—would not positively say over three; they went from the corner of the street towards the Esmond; did not see them fall; they fell as I was going toward them, but I was looking along the sidewalks to see if any other persons were coming; saw persons coming from the Esmond; saw none come out that I knew, except young Cornelius; when Charley shot Powers the latter was lying on the ground with his head near the sidewalk; Powers was lying on top of Cornelius when I first went over to where they were; they were on the ground near the sidewalk with their heads quartering down the street toward the Esmond.

EDWARD POST

Was in office in Esmond building on evening of 4th of July; heard a noise and looking out saw a crowd and knew there was a row; saw Cornelius make two steps off the sidewalk and heard him say "You'll kill me, will you!" then heard the report of a pistol and the flash seemed to be toward Mr. Cornelius, from the sidewalk, but from the way it seemed to me it would have gone over his head; soon after heard another report but could not tell where it came from; saw Cornelius raise his hand and reach forward as if to take hold of the other man; could not see anything in his hand; as he reached he repeated the words, "You'll kill me, will you;" as the closing words of the sentence were spoken, the pistol was fired; the flash seemed to come from about the height of a man's waist.

Cross-examination—Witness repeated his testimony as to position of the party, and stated that he heard five or six shots; did not see them men fall, the crowd getting in between me and them.

R GEARD PERKINS.

Was acquainted with Cornelius and am wife of Powers; at one time Powers told me he went to Reedville to see Mr. Cornelius, that Cornelius had told some lie on him and he went there to see him about it, but he expected other parties would be there who did not come and he said nothing about it, that he had two pistols, and if Cornelius insisted on shouldering the lie on him he would give him a choice of pistols and settle, that he would not shoot Cornelius in the back.

Cross-examination—Powers told me he would give him choice of pistols, but would not shoot him in the back nor use any violence on him; this was on the Saturday before the 4th of July; it was somewhere in Portland

J. T. ATWOOD.

Live in Portland; am a carpenter; was acquainted with Cornelius since 1851, and Powers since 1875; was in Portland at the Esmond on the evening of the 4th of July; on coming from west side of First street I met Cornelius, and walked toward the Esmond, and sat on a [illegible] dry box; Cornelius sat on my right; we sat there talking five minutes, and some person on the corner of Morrison street called Cornelius away; he got up and went round the corner; the next thing I heard Cornelius' voice; looked up and saw Cornelius but could not distinguish the other man till they got in the light from the Esmond doors; next saw Powers' right arm come up, and saw the flash of the pistol; should think that was the first shot; think the man who called Cornelius said, "Ben, I want to see you;" the men struggled off the sidewalk and fell; a third party came running up and drew a revolver; I ran to him and said, "Who are you?" He answered, "My name is Cornelius; that is my father lying there;" thought both men were killed; the crowd gathered round and I went home.

Cross-examined—I sat on this box while the struggle was going on; when Cornelius was called he got up quickly and went round the corner; did not see the pistol, but saw Powers' arm come up and the flash of fire; other flashes followed in rapid succession; don't think I was intoxicated that evening; might have taken three or five drinks that afternoon.

Re-direct—When I saw the flash of fire there was no person between me and the men; when Powers' arm came up, then the flash came right from his hand.

CHAS. F. HYDE

Knew Cornelius and knew Powers; was in the Esmond when the trouble began; heard noise of pistols or firecrackers; ran with the crowd into the street; as we got into the street some one called "Run or you'll get shot;" turned back, but returned into the street and found Cornelius lying partly on the sidewalk with Powers on top of him; some one pulled Powers off and he fell quartering on the pavement; lifted Mr. Cornelius to his feet, but finding he could not stand, let him down on the sidewalk; asked him who shot him and he said "... sol," that he was "shot all to pieces;" Powers struggled to his feet and was scuffling with Charley Cornelius; Lou. Hartman went across the street and got a glass of water, for which Mr. Cornelius had asked.

A journed till 9 A. M. to-day.

IN MEMORIAM.

Garfield Post, G. A. R., adopt Resolutions of Respect and Condolence regarding the Death of the President.

Garfield Post of the Grand Army, of this city, was in session Monday evening when the news of the death of the president was received. A committee consisting of F. K. Arnold, Henry E. Dosch, M. H. Northup, Wm. Kapus and W. V. Spencer was appointed to express by resolutions the sentiments of the post. The committee submitted the following:

HEADQUARTERS GARFIELD POST NO. 2[illegible], G. A. R., PORTLAND, Sept. 19.

WHEREAS, This Post has received, while holding its regular meeting, the sad and mournful intelligence of the death of the president of the United States, therefore

Resolved, That in the person of our late comrade James A. Garfield the nation has seen exhibited the highest courage as a soldier, the wisest counsel as a statesman and the most exemplary patience, fortitude and Christian resignation as a man—that whether on the field of battle, in the halls of legislation at the White House, or on the bed of death, his life has been such as to endear him to the hearts of the people, and make him the bright exemplar of meritorious youth.

Resolved, That in the career of James A. Garfield from the poverty and obscurity of his early life to the presidential chair, we see exemplified the noblest attributes of our American character and the grandest possibilities of our free institutions. That his triumphs over "those who jailers of the ambitious soul low birth and iron fortune" have placed him side by side with the lamented Lincoln, and together they will pass into history.

Resolved, That the cause and manner of his death call for the deepest execration of all true lovers of their country, and we hereby call upon all our former comrades in arms, regardless of political affiliations, to unite in wiping out this great blot upon our national character and to eliminate from the politics of the country the savage struggle for office which has now bowed a great nation with grief and shame, murdered a chief magistrate and threatens the downfall of our republican form of government.

Resolved, That we extend to the aged mother, the devoted wife and the bereft children of our late comrade, in this hour of their great affliction and grief, our tender and earnest sympathies, and we commend them to the great source of all comfort and peace.

CHAPMAN'S CASE CONTINUED.

A Number of Witnesses Introduced to Impeach the Character of the Prosecuting Witness.

The special committee last night continued the investigation of the charges preferred by W. B. Marye against City Surveyor Chapman.

Marye [illegible] the dates for private work he did while assisting city surveyor, eight or nine days in all.

Chairman Gildersleeve remarked, "We will permit no personalities this evening. You must confine yourselves strictly to the evidence. We don't want to have any more strictures like we read in THE OREGONIAN this morning."

R. H. Austin, axeman in the city surveyor's office, testified that he did not enter into an agreement to work for $60 per month; that he had no conversation with Chapman relative to working for $2 per day; that he did not hear Marye quarrel with Chapman over the former having received only $60 per month; that he never drew warrants for more than work performed and always received all that his wages were $2 per day and he received that amount.

C. E. Oliver, assistant city surveyor, did not remember anything about the quarrel referred to, that he did not remember about striking Chapman for full pay.

Thos. A. Dowling, employe of the city surveyor's office, testified that he had been employed for about full days; that he had explained [illegible] in the STANDARD which was that men received only $2.50 per day, while surveyors get $2.50 the wages of each being a little less than at $2 per day.

Thomas O'Mara and C. O. Dobbins corroborated about the same as Dowling. All three stated that they had never signed warrants for more than the amounts actually received.

THE DEFENSE.

This closed the testimony for Marye. The defense introduced a number of witnesses, by whom Mr. Chapman stated he would prove that Marye's statements, whether under oath or not, were not to be believed.

Geo. H. Ward and Jos. Day testified that they had worked for the city surveyor at $2 a day and received pay in full.

Jasper F. [illegible]ler, street contractor, testified that he had loaned Marye $100 which he did not pay until after repeated requests; that he repaid the amount in coin, not in favorable street estimates.

James Trainey and T. C. Ellington testified that they had loaned small sums of money to Marye, with the implied understanding on their part that he would favor them in estimates, though he made no such proposition.

M. Tierney testified that he had loaned Marye money which he had not repaid.

Wm. Sydney testified that he had loaned Marye $5 which he witness thinks is paid by an overestimate on private work on D street, but Marye made no proposition to pay in that way.

Ferry G. Baker testified that he had given Marye $1.50 for making a private estimate.

R. H. Austin, recalled—Remembered Marye's telling about Chapman and Tichnor's stealing a plan or catch-basin.

Abe Tichnor testified that he did not take from the committee rooms plans for a catch-basin and knew nothing about any such plans.

C. E. Oliver, recalled—Never received less than $[illegible] a day; never received more from the city than pay for work performed; have known Marye to make slight mistakes in the line book.

Adjourned until Thursday evening.

VERDICT

Of the Coroner's Jury in the Case of Julia Clark.

Yesterday Coroner Carnold concluded the inquest in the case of Julia Clark, the unfortunate young woman who was shot last Friday evening. The jury, after duly deliberating, rendered the following verdict:

We, the jury summoned to inquire into the cause of death of Julia Clark, do find that the said Julia Clark came to her death by a gunshot wound at the hands of one Robert W. Lamport, on the evening of the 18th day of September, at the southeast corner of Second and Morrison, in the second story of the building over the Coulsville [illegible] rooms, in the city of Portland, Multnomah county, state of Oregon.

T. G. HARKINS,
D. M. FIELD,
C. A. SMITH,
E. W. LYAN,
E. C. HEROY,
[illegible].

The only thing developed by the inquest besides what has been published in THE OREGONIAN, was the sworn statement of Lamport, who said when he stooped to pick up the flower, he felt his revolver in his hip pocket. Taking it out, he noticed that there was oil on the barrel; he had oiled it the day before; and as he moved his hand along to wipe the oil off, the revolver went off, inflicting the fatal wound.

DECISION IN U. S. CIRCUIT COURT BY JUDGE DEADY.

U. S. Circuit Court—District of Oregon.

Friday, Sept. 9, 1881.

B. F. Dowell vs. Jesse Applegate, et al—No. [illegible]. Suit in equity in aid of execution.

(1) DEED, WHEN VOID UNDER THE INTERNAL REVENUE ACT. A deed alleged to have been made with the intent to evade the internal revenue act or to defraud the United States, is not therefore invalid under § 158 (13 stat. 294; 14 id. 142), and to make it so, it must also appear that the deed was made without being duly stamped and with the intent thereby to evade the revenue act.

(2) GRANTEE IN DEED. Said § 158 only avoids a deed on account of the intent of the grantor therein, and it is immaterial with what intent the grantee received it or to what use he puts it.

(3) AMENDMENT OF BILL. After a demurrer to a bill is allowed, the right to amend rests in the discretion of the court, and leave to amend will not be granted unless it is necessary to promote or attain the ends of justice in the case.

(4) CASE IN JUDGMENT. A demurrer to a bill being sustained, the plaintiff asked leave to amend to the effect that a deed to the defendants was void under said § 158, for want of being duly stamped, which was denied—it also appearing that said parties were bona fide purchasers for an adequate consideration.

DEADY, J.

On June 24, 1881, William H. H. Applegate conveyed to Charles and John C. Drain, 200 acres of land in Douglas county, by a deed in which the sum of $500 was named as the consideration, having a stamp thereon of the value of 50 cents.

Among other things this suit is brought to set aside this conveyance as void because it was not stamped for $2000, the alleged actual consideration thereof, so as to subject the property described therein to the satisfaction of a judgment for the plaintiff against the defendant, Jesse Applegate, upon the ground that J. A. had conveyed the same to his son W. H. H. A. with intent to defraud the plaintiff.

On July 8, 1881, a demurrer to the bill by the Drains was sustained on the ground that it did not appear therefrom that the grantor had omitted to stamp the deed sufficiently with intent to defraud the revenue of the United States.

The plaintiff now moves for leave to amend his bill in this respect and the defendants object because the plaintiff, as to them is seeking practically to enforce a forfeiture upon purely technical grounds against innocent purchasers, and therefore ought not to be favored by a court of equity; and because it does not appear but that the remaining property described in the bill as having been conveyed by J. A. to his children in fraud of his creditors and still in their possession, is sufficient to satisfy the plaintiff's claim.

By the equity rule 35, the allowance of an amendment to a bill after a demurrer thereto has been sustained, is in the discretion of the court.

Stated briefly the proposed amendment is to the effect: (1) That the deed in question was made and delivered with the intent to defraud the United States. (2) That it was made and delivered by the grantor and accepted by the grantees with the intent to evade the provisions of the internal revenue acts; and (3), That the Drains caused said deed to be made and delivered, and used the same by having it recorded with intent to evade said acts and with intent to defraud the United States out of a stamp duty of the value of $1.50.

The allegation that the deed was either made, delivered, accepted or used with the intent to defraud the United States is false upon its face. The United States had no interest in this property, or claim upon the grantor, J. A. or W. H. H. A., that would render a conveyance of it to the Drains or anyone else fraudulent as to it.

What the pleader probably had in his mind but failed to express or allege, is that the deed was made, delivered, accepted and used without being duly stamped, with intent to evade, defraud, etc.

To stamp or omit to stamp a deed is something apart from and in addition to the making, delivering, accepting or using the same; and an allegation that either of these things was done with intent to defraud the United States or evade its revenue laws, is not an allegation that such deed was made, delivered, accepted or used without being duly stamped, and is therefore immaterial in this suit.

It is also immaterial with what intention the Drains accepted this deed. § 158 of the internal revenue act (13 stat. 293; 14 stat. 142), does not make any account of the intention with which a deed is "accepted" or received by the grantee. But in the case of a "bill of exchange, draft, order, or promissory note for the payment of money" it does provide that if such instrument is accepted, negotiated or paid without being duly stamped and with the intent to evade the provisions of the same act shall be invalid. The reason of this distinction is apparent. Whoever accepts a bill of exchange, thereby becomes an active party thereto. In effect and to that extent he makes or emits it—gives it a new life and circulation, and the intention with which he does so, so far as the stamp duty is concerned is placed by the stamp act in the same category as that of the maker.

But in the case of any "instrument or document" other than negotiable paper the intention or purpose of the party to or for whom it is made or delivered or the use he puts it to or makes of it, is simply immaterial.

Nor is it material in this suit whether the Drains caused this deed to be made, within the meaning of the statute or not, and could only become so in an action against them for the penalty imposed by the act. If their grantor omitted to stamp it as required by law, with the intent to defraud the revenue it is void, no matter who, or whether any one caused them to do so. Nor does it appear that the Drains caused this deed to be made, otherwise than by becoming the actual purchasers of the property described therein; and that this did not bring them within the purview or penalty of the statute is too plain for argument.

The proposed amendment is immaterial, and that is a sufficient reason why the motion should be denied.

But I do not think this amendment ought to be allowed, even if it contained the allegation that the deed to the Drains is void because the grantor therein made and delivered the same to them without its being duly stamped and with intent to defraud the United States.

Amendments to a bill after a demurrer thereto has been sustained, are not allowed as a matter of right, but rest in the discretion of the court; and are only allowed when they are necessary to promote or attain the ends of justice in the case. Hunt v. Rousmaniere, 2 Mason, 365.

The case sought to be made against those defendants by the amendment is this J. A. being a co-surety with the plaintiff on an official bond is alleged to have conveyed the premises to his son without or upon a grossly inadequate consideration, with intent to defraud the state and the plaintiff who has since been compelled to pay the bond. But it is admitted that the Drains purchased from the son for a sufficient consideration and without notice of such fraudulent intent, and are therefore not affected by it. Conceding this, however, it is claimed that the deed to the Drains is void because their grantor only put a stamp of the value of 50 cents on it when he should have put $2 00, with the intent to defraud the revenue of the difference, and therefore the property, for the purpose of this suit, must be considered as still held by the son under the fraudulent deed from J. A. and subject to be applied upon the latter's debt to the plaintiff.

But the plaintiff also imputes another and in my judgment a more probable motive for the omission to stamp the deed sufficiently, and that is, that the consideration might correspond with that in the deed from J. A. to his son, and thereby give strength to the claim that the former was a bona fide transaction based upon an adequate consideration.

It is not at all probable that while the actual consideration of the deed in question was $2000 that it would be expressed in the deed at $500, merely to save the expense of stamps to the value of $1 50, and at the same time incur thereby a penalty of many times that sum; while it is not improbable that it may for some reason have been done with a view of preserving an apparent uniformity in the considerations of the two conveyances.

The two motives could hardly co-exist and there is such a want of probability as to the former, that as between them, the latter must be accepted as the true one. But in any event, the Drains are innocent purchasers, and not a party to or participant in either alleged fraud or fraudulent intention; and while they may be affected by the invalidity of the deed to them on account of their grantor's fraudulent omission to sufficiently stamp the same, I do not think that justice or equity requires the court to permit the plaintiff to amend his bill after a demurrer thereto has been allowed, so as to enable him to enforce a claim to the property founded upon such invalidity—particularly as he had ample opportunity to bring the matter before the court by proper allegations in the amended bill to which the demurrer was taken.

Besides this there is much force in the suggestion that the plaintiff ought not to be allowed to proceed against the property conveyed to the Drains, until it appears that the property of J. A., either in his own hands or that of his children, is not sufficient to satisfy his claim.

The motion to amend is denied and the bill as to the defendants, Charles and John C. Drain, is dismissed with costs.

The place where the railroad to Dayton leaves the main track of the Walla Walla-Colfax division, is called Bolles Junction. It is 25½ miles from Walla Walla and 14 miles from Dayton. At Prescott a platform is full and tons are piled upon the ground. At Waitsburg, Kinnear & Weller's warehouse is overflowing and great piles of grain being made outside. W. N. Smith's platform is nearly full, and wagons are being constantly unloaded at both places. A mile above Waitsburg another platform is full. At Huntsville there is wheat, at Long's there is more wheat, and at Dayton the wheat is piled up in warehouses and on platforms, "till you can't rest." Parties from Blue Mountain station and Milton report the warehouses and platforms there filled to overflowing with sacked wheat, and great stacks of sacks in adjacent fields. Buyers are asking producers to "let up" on delivery, while the railroad men are worked night and day trying to carry the wheat away. But it is like trying to empty a barrel by the spigot while a big stream is flowing into the bung. Parties who have visited the farming region say "the farmers have not begun to haul in wheat yet. PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.

DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, IN CASES OF AGUE AND FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them a FAIR TRIAL.

For all bilious derangements, and as a simple purgative, they are unequaled.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

The genuine are never sugar coated.

Every box has a red wax seal on the lid, with the impression DR. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS.

The genuine McLANE'S LIVER PILLS bear the signatures of C. McLANE and FLEMING BROS. on the wrappers.

Insist upon having the genuine DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, prepared by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, Pa., the market being full of imitations of the name McLane, spelled differently but same pronunciation.

HUB PUNCH

TO TOP OFF A DINNER,

May be Drank Clear, as a Cordial.

For a dinner thoroughly appointed, the proper wind-way was to wash down the last triumphs of the feast with copious libations of rich, rare and curious old Port and Golden Sherry; but "HUB PUNCH" has added a new sensation to the picture. Its delicacy, aroma, flavor, and deliciousness, but gentle effects, proclaim it the nectar fit for the gods banqueting on Olympus.

Mix HUB PUNCH with Ice Water, Cold Tea, Lemonade, or Soda. It is unanimously pronounced unrivaled.

TESTIMONIALS.

"A splendid nectar."—Boston Courier.

"Delicious beyond description."—Boston Transcript.

"Added to the good things of the table it enlarges the pleasures of life and encourages good fellowship and good nature if rightly enjoyed."—Springfield Republican.

"Invaluable for a little treat when a friend drops in."—New York Evening Post.

"It is a great trouble to make Punch, and many a host has to call in the assistance of a person to brew it. Hub Punch is indispensable whenever known."—Spirit of the Times.

"The increasing popularity of Hub Punch is plain testimony to your success in using the best and purest components."—CLARK & TILFORD, New York.

"Our success in selling Hub Punch has surprised us, having sold within three months larger quantity than we anticipated selling in twelve."—SMITH & VANDERBEEK, New York and Chicago.

King of the Blood.

Is not a "cure-all." It is a blood-purifier and tonic. Impurity of blood poisons the system, deranges the circulation, and thus induces many disorders, known by different names to distinguish them according to effects, but being really branches or phases of that great generic disorder, Impurity of Blood. Such are Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Constipation, Nervous Disorders, Headache, Backache, General Weakness, Heart Disease, Dropsy, Kidney Disease, Piles, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Skin Disorders, Pimples, Ulcers, Swellings, &c., &c. King of the Blood prevents and cures these by attacking the cause, impurity of the blood. Chemists and physicians agree in calling it "the most genuine and efficient preparation for the purpose." Sold by Druggists, $1 per bottle. See testimonials, directions, &c., in pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," wrapped around each bottle.

KINNEY'S PATENT

TUBULAR FOUNTAIN FENCE

FOR CEMETERY LOTS.

The cut represents a single grave cemetery fence, constructed of tubular pipe; when filled with water serves not only as a fence, but vases are attached in which flowers, plants and vines may be placed. These are supplied with a constant moisture caused by the evaporation of water from the pipes through the vases. By our method the fountain plants grow luxuriantly for months without further attention. Nothing can be more appropriate for the living to use to adorn and beautify the graves of the departed loved ones. The fence is made in any size and supplied with granite or marble tablets, for the carving of the name or inscription for the dead. The canopy of which suspends the flower basket is intended for the trailing of vines, a part of which is shown in the cut. Wherever this fence has been seen, it is met with universal praise. In the wishing to secure territory or have fences put up, will please apply to A. WALKER, Salem, Or. PRICE—For child, $45; grown person, $50. Inclosing lots, per running foot, $2 75.

DR. PAUL M. BRENAN,

The Most Successful Physician on the Pacific Coast in the Treatment of

ALL CHRONIC & DIFFICULT DISEASES.

DR. BRENAN WILL GUARANTEE TO CURE any form of Disease of the generative organs or private disease. He has become an expert in the treatment of disease, weakness and derangement of the reproductive organs of both male and female, including diseases caused by the

FOLLIES OF YOUTH,

Such as SPERMATORRHEA or SEMINAL WEAKNESS, or LOSS OF PERFECT VITALITY. Nearly two-thirds of all the Chronic Diseases spring, either directly or indirectly, from some derangement of the sexual system, and yet this subject is neglected by the majority of the Medical Profession.

I know that persons who are unfortunate enough to be afflicted by any form of sexual disease have a delicacy in calling upon the proper physician in time, from a sense of modesty and sometimes from ignorance and permit those diseases to exist until their constitutions become corrupted, their organizations broken down and the hope of future happiness blighted, until death becomes a welcome messenger to carry them out of their miserable existence.

Everything strictly confidential under all circumstances.

Lost manhood perfectly restored. Catarrh, Bronchitis, Throat Diseases, Skin Diseases, Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint, and all Diseases of the Eye and Ear, Stomach and Bladder he can cure without fail. Consultation Free, and a list of printed questions sent to those living at a distance who cannot consult him personally. Enclose postage stamp for list.
